A Coalition of Societies Devoted to the Study of American Authors

25th Annual Conference on American Literature

May 22-25, 2014

Hyatt Regency Washington on Capitol Hill

Washington, D.C.

(202-737-1234)

Conference Director

Alfred Bendixen

Texas A&M University

Draft as of March 5, 2014

This on-line draft of the program is designed to provide information to participants in our 25th conference and provide them with an opportunity to make corrections. Participants should check the description of their papers and panels to ensure that names and titles and other information are spelled appropriately.

Times of Panels: If there is a conflict in the program (i.e., someone is booked to appear in two places at the same time), please let me know immediately. The program indicates that a few slots for business meetings are still available, but it will be difficult to make other changes. You can presume that the day of your panel is now fixed in stone (and it will not change without the concurrence of every person on that panel) but it may be necessary to make minor changes in the time of a panel.

Audio-Visual Equipment: The program also lists the audio-visual equipment that has been requested for each panel. Please note that it may be difficult or impossible to add any audio-visual equipment at this point, but individuals may make such requests. The ALA normally provides a digital projector and screen to those who have requested it at the time the panel or paper is submitted. Individuals will need to provide their own laptops and those using Macs are advised to bring along the proper cable to hook up with the projector. Please note that we no longer provide vcrs or overhead projectors or tape players.

Registration and Hotel: Participants should pre-register for the conference by going to the website at www.alaconf.org and either completing on line-registration which allows you to pay with a credit card or completing the registration form and mailing it along with the appropriate check to the address indicated. All participants are required to pre-register. Please note that registration fees go up after April 15, 2014 and that we will not be able to accept credit cards at the hotel. It is also important that you make your hotel reservation as soon as possible. Details for that are also on the ALA conference page.

Please email all corrections directly to abendixen@tamu.edu and copy the organizer of your session.

A few sessions still need chairs. If you are willing to serve as chair of one of these sessions, please email the conference director at abendixen@tamu.edu

If something prevents you from presenting your paper, please notify the chair of your panel and the conference director as soon as possible. Please send any questions to the conference director at abendixen@tamu.edu

Corrections and changes should be possible through the month of March. An updated program will be posted every week until we go to press during the second week of April. Programs will be mailed to those who have pre-registered during the first week of May and a note will be posted here indicating when the mailing has gone out.

This roundtable and discussion describes several major experiences in using the vast literary manuscript and other primary resources of the Library of Congress. The goal is to introduce younger researchers to opportunities in using primary sources and to encourage leaving the ease of on-line highlighted sources for the tangible benefits of using original papers in their contexts. The informal discussion will aim to raise research horizons for those attending and for their students. Opportunities for paid fellowships of various lengths also will be described. It is hoped that the discussion will lead to a fruitful exchange of ideas for approaching original research and encouraging the appropriate archiving of significant literary papers.

Session 20-H Writing Literary History in the 21st Century: A roundtable

Contributors to the forthcoming Cambridge History of American Poetry discuss the multiple processes, methods and conceptual frames that organize the history of American poetry, as told by CHAP, by rival literary histories, and by other channels of literary study. When does it make sense to think in terms of schools and self-conscious movement? When does it make sense instead to think in terms of geography, of regions? of topics, such as science or religion? Of microclimates and hinge points and influential single volumes (as with the publications of 1855 or 1922)? When and where is the history of American poetry comprehensible as one thing, and where does it look more like a braid of writers who do not all refer to one another?

Moderator: Stephen Burt and Alfred Bendixen

Roundtable 1: Reflections on the Canon of American Poetry: A Roundtable

Contributors to the forthcoming Cambridge History of American Poetry explain and debate what poets and poems matter to this version and other versions of American literary history: who has decided, who gets to decide, and why? What matters in literary studies today and how do those matters affect what poets we keep, what poets we take as reference points, what poems stand out and for whom, in the complexities and the density of the American poetic past, including the recent past

Moderators: Alfred Bendixen, Texas A&M University, and Stephen Burt, Harvard University

Participants:

Betty Donohue, Cherokee Nation

Roundtable 2: Writing Literary History in the 21st Century: A roundtable

Contributors to the forthcoming Cambridge History of American discuss the multiple processes, methods and conceptual frames that organize the history of American poetry, as told by CHAP, by rival literary histories, and by other channels of literary study. When does it make sense to think in terms of schools and self-conscious movement? When does it make sense instead to think in terms of geography, of regions? of topics, such as science or religion? Of microclimates and hinge points and influential single volumes (as with the publications of 1855 or 1922)? When and where is the history of American poetry comprehensible as one thing, and where does it look more like a braid of writers who do not all refer to one another?

Moderator: Stephen Burt and Alfred Bendixen
