

From Adam Lewis, PSA Member-at-Large

The Edgar Allan Poe Society website (eapoe.org) founded by Jeffrey Savoye is an invaluable digital archive of Poe's work. Many other databases and archives provide access to digitized versions Poe's publications and manuscripts. Physical copies of Poe's letters and manuscripts can be found at the Boston Public Library, the Huntington Library, and the Valentine Museum in Richmond, and many other libraries throughout the country. These digital and physical archives represent incredible resources for teaching Poe in the U.S. and throughout the world, inside classrooms and to larger publics.

At the upcoming American Literature Association Conference in Boston (May 23-26, 2019), the PSA will sponsor a panel about Poe in the Archives. We are interested in papers that address physical and digital archives of Poe's work, incorporating archival material in the classroom, and innovative uses of Poe's archives in public and digital humanities projects.

To submit a proposal, please send a title and abstract (250 words or less) to Adam Lewis at lewisaj@bc.edu with "PSA ALA Panel 2019" in the subject line. The deadline for submission is January 15, 2019. Panelists will be notified by January 25.
