

Call for Papers

Society for the Study of the American Short Story

The Society for the Study of the American Short Story will present two events at the ALA convention in Chicago in 2022. The first will be a roundtable discussion session of new areas for scholarly investigation of the genre, an open conversation involving members of the audience. Panel members will be selected by invitation only.

The second panel will be more traditional with three papers and a discussion period. Proposals should be two paragraphs long. The first should present the basic subject and a condensed statement of the thesis of the paper. The second should present the academic position and credentials of the speaker including pertinent publications.

Please send all proposals to society president James Nagel at jnagel@uga.edu before the deadline of January 28.
