

The Society for the Study of the

American Short Story

Call for Papers

The story society will once again organize three activities at the American Literature Association convention in Chicago: a standard panel, a roundtable discussion, and a business meeting. The speakers for the roundtable will be chosen by invitation only, but the standard panel is open for the submission of proposals by all members of the society. The topic for the papers is "American stories of immigration." Proposals should consist of only two paragraphs, the first presenting an abstract of the paper to be delivered, the second giving the credentials, previous publications, and academic affiliation of the proposer. Proposals should be received by January 25 for consideration. Please send them to Jim Nagel at jnagel@uga.edu.